

Why Are Subcontractors Risky?

With independent consultants and subcontractors, you never know what you are going to get. Poor resources not only hurt quality, but also put your schedule at risk if a change is necessary. Even with skilled independent contractors, there is an issue of flexibility, and billing rates become greater motivation than customer satisfaction. With Trinity, that risk is eliminated. Our consultants are only measured on customer satisfaction and skills (both technical and soft). They are mentored and encouraged to constantly learn new technologies and methods. The Trinity executive management team is no exception, measuring itself only on customer satisfaction and employee happiness. This concerted effort has ensured the success of our customers by eliminating the risk of poor execution from untested resources.